Legion Baseball: A Century of Diamonds

It was a big vision from a Big Ten commissioner. On July 17, 1925, the collegiate athletic executive spoke to The American Legion Department of South Dakota convention.

"There is nothing in our national life which stresses certain qualities that are expressed in our athletics," said John Griffith. "Intelligent courage, fighting instinct and cooperation are some things which I believe are visibly expressed in our athletic games... American Legion posts, as a matter of citizenship training, could easily carry on such athletic activities throughout the United States."

Just seven years after World War I, the former Army major understood the need for physically fit patriots to answer their nation's call if needed. After Griffith's address to the convention, a resolution was passed and American Legion Baseball was born.

The program was a hit. By 1926, more than 52,000 players participated. Legends and war heroes such as Yogi Berra, Ted Williams and Bob Feller would comprise some of the 87 Hall of Famers who have played American Legion Baseball over its first century. By 1947, none other than Yankees-great Babe Ruth would serve as a national spokesman and consultant for the program. In 2010, the National Executive Committee selected Shelby, N.C., as the home of The American Legion Baseball World Series. Coverage of the games by ESPN soon followed. Over its first century, conservative estimates are that more than 10 million young people have played American Legion Baseball.

During its meeting in May 2021, The American Legion National Executive Committee unanimously passed a resolution calling for Legionnaires to raise awareness about amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), a terminal disease that took the life of baseball great Lou Gehrig. The resolution encourages a moment of silence on June 2, which also marks the date that Gehrig died in 1941. Lou Gehrig's disease is a condition that has disproportionately impacted veterans. Informing the public about the tragic consequence of ALS can lead to additional research, funding, therapies and a still undiscovered cure.

Players born in 2014 or later are not eligible to play American Legion Baseball.

National American Legion Baseball Rules Player Recruitment Plan B

The Department of Ohio American Legion Baseball recruiting plan allows for selection of players who attend nearby high schools. Please note that National Recruiting Rule 4 - Player Recruiting was changed in 2020. As a result of the change, combined total enrollment of high schools cannot be 7,500 for grades 1-, 11, and 12.

Transfer Rules - Department of Ohio American Legion Baseball

American Legion Baseball rules state that a player must play for the team nearest to where they live. The program prohibits the creation of all-star teams, "super" teams, or the one-shot recruiting of exceptional players for the short term. Please note that players who graduate in 2026 must play for the last American Legion Baseball team they played for, or the team nearest their parents' domicile.

However, American Legion Baseball recognizes that situations arise which merit consideration, on a case-by-case basis. American Legion Baseball tries to be fair in its review of such cases.

To address many special situations, Department of Ohio American Legion Baseball has designed transfer rules. Based on special circumstances, transfer rules allow for the approval of an American Legion Baseball player to play for a different team than the one, which is established by the rules, should be played for.

A transfer request by a player should be based on legitimate, logical circumstance, within the framework of established American Legion Baseball rules. Examples of special circumstances or situations are detailed in this section.

Only Senior players will be permitted to change teams via the transfer process. Approved transfers are for the current season only, as detailed in National Rule 4-D - Player Eligibility.

All other rules of eligibility will apply in any transfer request approval.

The state borders of Ohio are open for Department of Ohio American Legion Baseball Players residing in Ohio or West Virginia can play in the other State on a case by case basis, approved by each states Department Chairman.

Permission to transfer from Department of Ohio American Legion Baseball to a team in another state must be approved by the American Legion Athletic Commissioner from both states.

There are special circumstances that may be considered for permission to transfer from one American Legion Baseball team to another. Examples of those circumstances include, but are not limited to:

1. A new American Legion Baseball team is formed that is closer to the player's residence than the American Legion Baseball team that the player currently plays for.
2. A new American Legion Baseball team is formed that draws players from the requesting player's school, and they want to play with their fellow classmates.
3. There is no American Legion Baseball team in the player's hometown, or recruited from their high school, but there is an American Legion Baseball team in a neighboring community.
4. The American Legion Baseball team for which the player last played has disbanded, but another team exists in the area.
5. The player lives in one Ohio community during the school year, but in another during the season and wishes to play where the player lives in the summer. This could be the case in divorces where the player lives with one parent during the school year, and, by court decree, lives with the other parent during the summer.
6. The player's parents or guardians have moved within the state.

Initiatint a Transfer Request. Any request for permission to transfer one American Legion Baseball team to another must be made by the player. Managers or coaches of American Legion Baseball teams are prohibited from initiating a transfer request.

The player must make written application for transfer approval on the official National Player Transfer Form #76, which can be downloaded from the National American Legion Baseball website or the Department of Ohio American Legion Baseball website.

All transfer applications must be submitted to the district athletic chairman no later than June 5. Any decision by the district athletic chairman or a representative of the department athletic committee is final, however there is a right of appeal process. Questionable situations should be directed to the district athletic chairman.

Manager Approval. Any transfer request made by the player must be approved by both the manager of the team losing the player, and the manager of the team gaining the player. The approval of both teams must be made in writing on the official National Player Transfer Form #76.

New players in junior high school, and high school players in 9th grade shall play for the base school team of their parents or guardians legal residence. Transfer rules do not apply to Junior players.

Transfer Rule 1. Players who attend a school outside the geographical boundary determined by the parents or guardians legal residence may play for the American Legion Baseball team drawing from that school, or from an American Legion Baseball team that is the nearest team to where the player lives.

A player must decide on which team to play for and file the decision, in writing, with the district baseball chairman by June 5.

Transfer Rule 2. Players who cannot complete their American Legion Baseball eligibility due to the post they last played for no longer sponsoring an American Legion Baseball team, may play for the next nearest team to their parents or guardians legal residence. Players must declare the circumstances of the situation, in writing, to the district baseball chairman, including a request to play for the next nearest American Legion Baseball team.

Transfer Rule 3. Players who cannot play for the American Legion Baseball team they played for during the previous season due to a permanent change of their parents or guardians residence shall play for the team nearest to the new legal residence. A notarized statement from the parents or guardians stating the permanent move and listing the previous address, must be given to the district baseball chairman responsible for the American Legion Baseball team where the player now resides.

Transfer Rule 4. If a player's parents are divorced or separated, and by court order the player lives with each parent for a determined part of a year, the player may play for an American Legion Baseball team near either of the parents' residences. The player must state, in writing to the district baseball chairman, the decision on which American Legion Baseball team the player will play, no later than June 5.

Next Nearest Team. American Legion Baseball rules stipulate that an American Legion Baseball player must play for the team nearest to where they live. If a player tries out for the nearest American Legion Baseball team but does not make that team, the player must obtain a written statement from the manager of that team, stating by the established rules, the player cannot be used by that team, at which point, the player may apply to play for the next nearest American Legion Baseball team to their residence.

If the player makes a personal decision that they do not want to play for the nearest team to their residence, for whatever reason, which is their privilege, the player can elect to play for the next nearest team to their residence. However, the player must obtain a written statement from every team bypassed that they cannot use that player.

The nearest team, or the next nearest team, shall be based on the shortest driving distance, as calculated by Google Maps. Please note that players who graduate in 2026 shall play for the last American Legion Baseball team the player played for, or for the team nearest their parents domicile.

Any request to bypass an American Legion Baseball team must be done using the official National Player Transfer Form #76.

If a player asks for a release from a post, and the post does not wish to release the player, every opportunity must be given to ensure that the player can actively participate with the team.

If a player tries out for a team but the online team roster is already filled, the player will be granted an automatic waiver to go to another American Legion Baseball team. Only players who take part in a team tryout will be afforded this opportunity.

Please note that just as a player has the right to ask for a transfer, the manager of an American Legion Baseball team has the right and is not required to release the player. The manager's decision must be based on established recruiting rules of American Legion Baseball and can be appealed through the Right of Appeals process.

If an American Legion Baseball team will not release a player, that team must give the player every opportunity to actively participate with the team.

Failure of a player to follow the transfer process, as outlined, could result in disqualification from American Legion Baseball competition.

Failure by a team manager, business manager, or post to follow the established transfer process as outlined may result in having the team suspended or disqualified from further American Legion Baseball competition in the Department of Ohio American Legion Baseball program.

Please note that a player thinking that they will receive more exposure to college or professional baseball scouts or more playing on one team over another is not a valid reason to approve a transfer request. American Legion Baseball is not to be exploited by a player or manager at the cost of the program. If a player is as good as thought to be, the scouts will find them, regardless of which American Legion Baseball team the player plays for.

The History of American Legion Baseball

American Legion Baseball is a national institution, having thrived through a world war, several national tragedies, and times of great prosperity as well as great despair.

The league still stands behind the traditional values upon which it was founded in 1925. American Legion Baseball has taught hundreds of thousands of young Americans the importance of sportsmanship, good health and active citizenship. The program is also a promoter of equality, making teammates out of young athletes regardless of their income levels or social standings. American Legion Baseball has been, and continues to be, a stepping stone to manhood for millions of young men who have gone on to serve their country or community, raise families or play the sport at the highest level.

A modest beginning. Community service has always been a core value of The American Legion. In 1925, this commitment was furthered to include a baseball program.

The league was first proposed at an American Legion state convention in Milbank, S.D., when Sioux Falls attorney and Department Commander Frank G. McCormick invited his close friend, Maj. John L. Griffith, to address the convention. Instead of a traditional speech, Griffith, who was also the collegiate commissioner of the Western Conference (now the Big Ten), spoke about the role athletics can play in the development of youth.

“The American Legion could well consider the advisability of assisting in the training of young Americans through our athletic games,”

Griffith said. Athletic competition teaches courage and respect for others, fostering their growth into active citizens, he explained.

The South Dakota convention agreed and passed a resolution urging the Legion to create an organized summer baseball league that started each June. National Commander James A. Drain backed the resolution, which passed that fall at the Legion’s national convention in Omaha, Neb. It read:

“RESOLVED: That The American Legion ... inaugurate and conduct baseball leagues and tournaments for local championships, and that local champions determined by the competitions be given opportunity to compete in departmental, sectional and regional tournaments, and that a junior world series championship baseball series be conducted at each national convention ... “

The first program in the world to provide a national baseball tournament for teenagers, American Legion Baseball was born.

In 1926, posts in 15 states began to make Griffith’s vision a reality. They organized and sponsored teams, drafted local schedules and conducted championship tourneys. Postseason tournaments at the state, sectional and regional levels culminated with a national championship. Only a few changes have been made to the format over the years. The tournament still has a similar setup: 64 teams play at eight regional sites, with eight teams going on to the World Series. The winning team receives a trip to Major League Baseball’s World Series, a tradition dating back to 1926.

A little help from their friends. The first American Legion Baseball World Series was held in Philadelphia in 1926. Yonkers, NY, Post 321 beat a team from Pocatello, Idaho, capping off what appeared to be a successful first season.

The league, however, hit a few growing pains in its second year. In 1927, the Legion's national convention convened in Paris. With the organization's financial coffers stretched thin from the trip's expenses, the Legion couldn't fund a World Series. No champion was named and the future of American Legion Baseball looked bleak, as the inaugural season wound up costing more than originally planned.

But the Legion's Americanism director, Dan Sowers, worked to keep the league afloat. The tournament format needed $50,000, and Sowers was determined to raise it. Early in 1928, he went to an executive meeting for professional baseball, hoping to reach a sympathetic ear. He found one in Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who pledged a $50,000 annual donation from Major League Baseball. Legion Baseball resumed in 1928, and by 1929 participants were coming from every state and the District of Columbia.

Still, the program wasn't in the clear. Like other institutions, Legion Baseball fell on tough times during the Great Depression. In 1933, MLB's funds were sapped dry, and Legion Baseball was left without a sponsor. The annual $50,000 donation was pulled, and it looked likely the national tournament would be abandoned indefinitely.

Again, Sowers set out to find a generous sponsor. Initially, he hounded big corporations, but he was concerned they'd treat to his fledgling baseball league as a public-relations arm. He turned to Frank Knox, a newspaper publisher and former department commander. Knox, who originally cautioned Sowers against using corporate sponsorship, contributed $5,000 and gave Sowers letters of introduction to several other newspaper publishers. An additional $28,500 was raised in donations from the Chicago Daily News, the Omaha World-Tribune, the San Francisco Chronicle, the Indianapolis News, the New Orleans Item-Tribune and the Atlanta Journal. Sowers received the final $6,500 from his own boss, Col. Henry L. Doherty, president of Cities Services.

Legion Baseball soldiered on, even though some posts were still forced to run teams on shoestring budgets. MLB resumed its funding in 1935, starting with a $20,000 donation and continues today supporting the program with an annual grant.

American Legion Baseball in the modern era. American Legion Baseball enjoys a reputation as one of the most successful and tradition-rich amateur athletic leagues. Today, the program registers teams in all 50 states plus Canada. Each year young people, ages 13 to 19, participate. Since its inception in 1925, the league has had millions of players, including countless who have gone on to play in college and professional baseball, with 82 inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Legion Baseball also has a reputation for serving the young people who play for it. In college scholarships, the league annually awards a total of $25,000 - $500 for a player selected from each department based upon leadership, character, scholarship and financial need. Recently, the Legion passed a resolution allowing corporate sponsorship, in the hope of creating more financial aid for college. Diamond Sports currently funds $25,000 in scholarships for the American Legion Baseball All-Academic Team. Eight players receive a $2,500 scholarship and the "Captain" of the All Academic Team receives a $5,000 scholarship.

In 1949, the national player of the year was first named through the arrangement of Robert Quinn, director of The National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum. Fittingly, winners receive a trip to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., making them the only amateur athletes invited to the exhibit. The award is now named after George W. Rulon, who served as program coordinator from 1961 to 1987.

Three other recognition awards were established in the 1970s: the Dr. Irvin L. "Click" Cowger RBI Award, the Rawlings Big Stick Award and the Bob Feller pitching awards. All recognize strong performances in the regional and national tournaments.

Over the years, plenty of other major corporations have joined Gatorade in sponsoring Legion Baseball. In the 1940s, Ford Motor Co. dealers supplied uniforms for local teams. Diamond Sports signed on as the “Official Baseball of the American Legion World Series.”

A prestigious pedigree. Major League Baseball and American Legion Baseball don’t have a formal partnership, but the two owe each other a tremendous debt of gratitude. MLB has sponsored Legion Baseball almost since its inception, and Legion Baseball has returned the favor, churning out major league prospects since the alumni base has been old enough to be scouted. The number of former Legion players who have gone on to the pros is far too large to chart. More than half of current major-leaguers played Legion Baseball. So did almost every working MLB manager, along with several former commissioners. In all, 82 program graduates are in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Naturally, Legion Baseball’s alumni base includes some of the sport’s most recognizable names. Yogi Berra played for Fred W. Stockham Post 245 in St. Louis and was once quoted as saying it was the most fun he ever had. Ted Williams suited up for a post in San Diego. Frank Robinson led his Oakland, Calif., team to the only back-to-back national championships in program history. Babe Ruth was too old to join when Legion Baseball started, but he spent the final years of his life promoting the program as its director of operations. Other prominent players include Justin Verlander, Ryne Sandberg, Roy Campanella, Dusty Baker, Albert Pujols, Greg Maddux and Chipper Jones.

Of all the notable former players, Legion Baseball had perhaps the greatest impact on former Cleveland Indians great Bob Feller. A self-described shy farm kid from rural Iowa, Feller cut his teeth playing for Variety Post 313. He says the experience taught him as much about life as it did baseball. Legion Baseball gave him an outlet to be discovered as a pitcher, but also gave him a chance to form lifelong friendships, learn to deal with letdown in athletic competition, and become better prepared for the mental and emotional strain of fighting in a war.

The first Legion alumnus elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame, Feller wrote a column for The American Legion Magazine in June 1963, expressing his love and appreciation for the league after it honored him with a plaque in 1962.

“Truthfully, I feel I should have given a plaque to The American Legion rather than receiving one from it,” Feller wrote. He penned the column free of charge and admitted that he never endorsed anything he didn’t believe in during his career, even for large sums of money.

Yet baseball isn’t the only area where former players have excelled. Legion Baseball graduates have gone on to prominence in other career fields. Former Vice President Dick Cheney played for Post 2 in Casper, Wyo. Famed journalist and author Tom Brokaw played Legion ball in South Dakota, and Secretary of Agriculture Tom Vilsack was on a team in Pennsylvania.

In short, Legion Baseball graduates are proud contributors throughout our society and often are the most successful people in their respective career fields.
